TRIMBLE

May Bolt the Seventh Congressional District Convention if He Can't Control It.

IS BLUE OVER PROSPECTS

His Followers Make Threats Which May Precipitate Lively Times if They Are Carried Out.

A MONKEY AND PARROT TIME

PADUCAH, Ky., July 10.—The congressional convention for this (the seventh) district convenes here this afternoon. There is already full assurance of a big delegation and much interest in the convention's work.

South Trimble, it is said, has become frightened over the prospects of defeat and threatens to bolt the convention on the ground of unfair treatment.

Moody and Allen's friends can and will organize the convention. If this is done and results in the seating of the regular delegation from Owen Trimble will be defeated. This he recognizes and is blue over and hence his threat of bolting.

There is talk of threat on the part of the Trimble delegates to force their way into the convention and secure lodges and hold their places. The promise is that there will be a monkey and parrot time at last.

POLICE COURT

Will Phoebe is fined $30 and Costs and George Davis $10 and Costs for Whipping Women.

There was large crowd of spectators in the police court today, many being attracted by the safe blowers trial. Charles, alias French and George Wilkinson, the accused burglars and safe blowers, were represented by Attorney W. A. Berry. The commonwealth announced through County Attorney Graves that it had just learned of important witnesses, and asked a continuance, which was granted until Thursday.

The case against Sterling Fitzgerald, colored, for maliciously cutting Allen Jackson, colored, was continued until Thursday.

George Dozier, colored, for beating John Parker, colored, was fined $10 and costs.

Will Phoebe, colored, for beating Maria Gostwin, because she took some money from him, was fined $30 and costs and the court told him as consolation that if it were not for the woman's reputation he would have fined him $50 and maybe sent him to jail besides.

Remonstrance. "You think I had better stimulate insanity?" said the accused man. "I do," answered the adviser. "What's the best way?" "Well, you're no actor, of course. If I were you I'd get some South Africa war maps and repeat the geographical names over and over. In the course of a short time I don't believe you'll like to pretend at all."—Washington City.

In addition to the convention the party leaders will ratify the nomination of McKinley and Roosevelt and efforts will be made to gather in at the metropolis one of the largest crowds seen here for years. The people should remember this chance to visit the metropolis and at the same time attend the state convention and get ready to go up in large numbers. The delegation to the convention will be as large as conditions will allow and there will be a cordial invitation to all to go along to the big jollification.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President.
WILLIAM M'KINLEY,
Of Ohio.
For Vice President.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
Of New York.

The Democrats are explaining why they left some things out of their national platform. They will soon be trying to explain also why they put some things therein.

The people of the world, who only a few months since learned more than they ever knew about Spain, Cuba and the Philippines and later were forced to gain information relative to South Africa, are just now studying Chinese geography. Wars are truly educating.

A trio of would-be's—Bryan, Stevenson and 16 to 1.

It is of great importance to America to keep the Bull, the Bear, etc., out of China, that the Kingdom may not go to pieces. The trade of China is too healthy to be split.

Roosevelt has spoken of it as "the big war from '61 to '65." That is clear and soothing to the interested and a designation which should stand.

The Democrats are honestly saying they believe they can carry Illinois and Wisconsin in November—the former with Stevenson's aid and the latter because of the German disaffection. The Democrats are nothing if not good at claiming everything in sight, but as it will do the Republicans good it will do no harm to let this claim go for all it may be worth.

The farm price of wheat on December 1st in each year of President Cleveland's administration averaged 54.1 cents per bushel. Under the McKinley administration the average price has been 67.5 cents per bushel, an increase of 25 per cent over the Democratic price.

Washington exercised the veto power twice, Monroe but one time, Lincoln three times, and McKinley four times. Tolerance and confidence in the executive branches of the government have characterized the actions of our great presidents.

There are a number of so-called Democratic papers in this state which haven't and will not put up the Kansas City ticket. They can't and won't endorse the 16 to 1 plank even if it is already a dead issue. There are quite a number of sound money Democrats, and this is one of the evidences of this fact.

There were no statesmen at the Kansas City convention. Every speech made showed the gathering one of office seekers, and when this is said all is said. The leaders of old of the party have clearly abandoned it to a wreckless gang.

THE OUTLOOK TO DEMOCRATS.

Louisville Commercial: "In 1896 Bryan received 156 votes, forty-eight less than a majority. Give him every vote he carried then, and where are his votes to come from? Present him with Kentucky, Indiana, West Virginia, and Maryland, and he will not get an electoral vote in any of them, and he would still lack several votes of an election. Give him New York and Indiana, and, if he loses Kentucky, Maryland and West Virginia, he will be beaten. He carried South Dakota, Wyoming and Kansas the last time. He will lose them this year. These seventeen votes subtracted from the 176 votes cast for him in 1896 would leave him sixty-five votes less than the 234 necessary to an election. There is no consolation in the figures anywhere for Bryan.

THE SOLE ISSUE.

Lexington Herald (Dem.): "In this state the sole issue upon which the people will divide will be the repeal or continuance of the Goebel law. Kentucky can prosper under any policy which is endurable by any other state or section. She has distinct interests which it is the duty of her people to protect, but she has no interest comparable to the restoration and preservation of civil liberty, which is based upon a free and honest ballot box.
"We believe that a majority of the Democrats of Kentucky regard this as the one vital issue. Power of party association, influence of party prejudice, the inordinate passions which party contests create, the fear of personal and political ostracism, will no doubt make many hundreds if not thousands of excellent men vote for the Democratic ticket, in spite of their judgment that the state issues are the most important.
"We believe that so long as the Goebel law remains on the statute book, so long as there is power given to a practically irresponsible board to appoint irresponsible boards and to control by their irresponsible and untrav-decision the elections of Kentucky and to declare the elected defeated and the defeated elected, the duty of Kentucky is to do whatever may be necessary to overthrow that system; and we believe that this can be done only by the overwhelming defeat of every nomination made by every convention which endorses the Goebel law or which refuses to declare its opposition to that bill and its desire for its repeal."

WOMAN'S NIGHTMARE.
The shadows when she realizes the danger and pain of child-bearing.

There is so much an effort and danger to store for the young mother, that her happy anticipation soon gives way to a feeling of dread at the thought of the pain which she must undergo. Love is the scented air,
Love is the lofty mountain,
Love is the spreading sea;
Love is a mighty river,
Love is the placid sea."

The girl felt an arm around her,
She gently inclined her head,
And she closed her eyes and she waited
And after a while she said:
"Love may be plains and mountains
And oceans that ebb and flow—
I find that it's awfully pleasant,
And I guess that's enough to know."

AN OLD-TIME SINGER.

I don't want any hymnbook when the Methodist is high,
A'min' out the ol' ones that went thrillin' to the sky
In the old camp meeting seasons, when 'twas "glory hallelu!"
An' "brother rise and tell us what the Lord has done for you!"

For I know them songs so perfect that when I get the swing
Of the tune they want to go to I kin shed my eyes an' sing!
"On Jordan's Stormy Banks" an' ol' "Amazing Grace"—they seem so nat'ral, I'm like some one that's singin' in a dream!

Oh, when it comes to them ol' songs I allus does my part,
An' I've got my ol' time Bible down, as you might say by heart!
When the preacher says the fast word in the givin' of his text
I smile with satisfaction, 'cos I know what's coming next!

The wife says, "That's amazin'!" an' the preacher says—says he,
With lots of 'meanin' in his voice, an' lookin' queer at me—
"Since you know more of the Bible than the best of us kin teach, Don't you think you oughter practice what you're sayin' us to preach?"

Well, that gits me in a corner—an' I sorter raise my eyes,
An' the tune about them titles to the "mansions in the skies!"
I want the benediction then—I'm ready to depart!
But when it comes to singin'—well, I've got the hymns by heart!

THE NEW BABY.

(Its Mother.)
"Hill's dea's sweetest" 'tittle sing at ever was.
An' his mozer sinks 'e world of him, as ever was.

Now, don't coo laugh at me, no little nuggins,
Or I'll take him in my arms an' O' I'll huggins!"

(Its Father.)
"Here quit your pullin' at my hair! let go my beard!
With your infernal yellin' I swear yan've got me quivered."

Not one minute's peace I've had since you arrived;
Shut up! or by the eternal, "H, I'll tan your hide!"

(Its Brother.)
"It's mighty tough, you bet, to watch this kid!
Why, he kicked me in the mouth just now! He did!"

O' How I wish that he was miles and miles away.
Maybe I wouldn't see that baseliel game—well, say!"

DISCONSOLATE MAN.

When God had set the stars in space
And made the land and sea,
And raised the rugged mountains high
And turned the rivers free
And peopled all the woods, the air
And fields and streams, he stood
And gazed a while upon his work
And said that it was good.

There stands a man haranguing men,
Across the crowded way:
"It's wrong! It's wrong! It's deadly wrong!"

I hear him talk and say,
And while he talks and while they hear,
The winds God made to blow
Keep blowing and the whirling streams
With faith unblemished flow.

The mountains grand as ever stand,
The sea is in its place;
Serene and green the fruitful plain
Turns up a smiling face;
The birds are singing songs of hope
As loudly as they can,
And God is still acknowledged good
By all on earth but man!

GREAT TRUTHS.

Great truths are portions of the soul of man;
(Great souls are portions of eternity.)
Each drop of blood that ere through truth
true heart ran,
With lofty message, ran for thee and me!

For God's law, since the starry song began,
Hath been and still forevermore must be
That every deed which shall outlast time's span
Must glow the soul to be sweet] and free;

Slavo is no word of fleshless lineage sprang—
Too many noble souls have thought and died,
Too many mighty poets lived and sang;
And our good Saxon, from lips parted
With martyr fire, throughout the world
hath rang

FROM THE SONG OF THE CANOE.
Drip! Drip!
And I thrill with the start—
For the ripples and the waters part
At the song the paddle sings.

Drip! Drip!
And lo it brings
The word of a sweet command to me,
And leaping to answer it—I am free!
Water-woods weaving in vain to stay me,
Fain, fain,
And the reeds arrayed at my prow to delay me—
Drip! Drip!
For the paddle swinging along my side—
Drip! Drip!
Hath a deeper truth than the still things know
And I go, I go!

Glide! Glide!
Across the calm of the evening tide
When the first white stars begin.
Creep! Creep!
Where the lilies sleep—
Stars in a sky as soft, as deep—
The paddle singing me in.

Hush! Hush!
For the tall reeds hush
My side as though they love me!
Rest! Rest!
On the hushed breast
With the roof of the leaves above me.

Observations
...at Random

It begins to look as if the city is going to be depopulated as a result of the daily exodus of people to the various summer resorts or to visit friends and relatives in other places. Nearly all the trains leaving the city are crowded,
and the hackmen are becoming rich,
as no one would think of walking to the depot even if the weather were not so excessively hot—and it isn't everybody who owns a carriage.

The insufferable heat, together with the tearing up of the oleiferous disease rocking gatters on Broadway, renders the season a most opportune one to visit elsewhere.

Spouting of heat, Paducahans accuse to-day a great deal of it. The thermometer these days seldom falls below 90, but on the contrary seems to delight in hovering about the 100 mark, which, however, it has not yet reached this year. In other cities when the mercury goes up to 90 and 95 the papers make quite a "howdy do" over it and seem to think it wonderful, indeed.

More than $15,000,000 worth of the old fashioned fractional paper currency is still outstanding, and, though some of it has doubtless been destroyed, the bulk of it is held by collectors and private individuals, according to Washington information. Every now and then some old person dies, and the heirs, finding a quantity of the "shin plasters" in a disused pocketbook or some other hiding place, send them to Washington to be redeemed. Decem-nally, too, banks forward quite a lot of the notes in broken sheets, just as they got them many years ago. At first these sheets had to be cut apart with scissors, but afterward they were perforated like postage stamps so as to be torn apart. Not long ago the treasury received a handkerchief full of this currency, of the first issue, each note being signed by Treasurer spinner with his own hand.

About $3000 worth of this fractional paper comes in for redemption each year, and some of the best of it is sent out by the department to be given away in response to applications from collectors.

Twelve Hours of Agency That Seemed Like Years

The following are extracts from a letter from a sergeant in the Scottish Highlanders, dated Dec. 10, says the London Telegraph: "The Black Watch
in front made an attempt to charge the position, but we had to retire and simply run for it, the enemy blowing at us all the way and cropping our fellow soldiers like stalks from their positions. There was nothing for it but to lie down and pretend to be dead, and this I did about 5:30 a. m., till, I presume, 6 p. m., the sun pouring down on me all the time, and not a drop of water all day, and dare not eat or drink, and expecting every minute to be my last. I could hear nothing but the cries, moans and prayers of the wounded all around me, but I wasn't so much as look up to see who they were. Shot and shells were going over me all day from the enemy and our side, and plenty of them striking within a yard of me—I mean bullets, not shells—and yet I never hit me. I believe some of the fellows lost their heads and walked right up to the enemy's place, singing till they dropped them. One young fellow close to me said he would lie a day for it about 3 p. m. I tried my best to persuade him not to, but he would go. A couple of seconds later I could hear them pitting at him, and then his groans for about a minute, and then he was quiet. About this time the sun began to get fearfully
hot, and I began to feel it in the legs, which were now very painful and swollen, because I was perched with thrust. Most of the wounded round me had ceased groaning by this time.
As it began to get dark I managed to wiggle my body through the shrub further back, and after I had been at it some time, on looking up, found myself right in front of another in-trenchment of the enemy. They sent a few rounds at me, but they struck me in front and ricocheted over my head. After a bit, it getting darker, I got up and walked by, and there was nothing but dead highlanders all over the place."

HOME OF THE FRIENDLESS

Words of Praise Meted Out Which Call for the Liberty Solicited.

In the bustle and confusion of our busy life in the city of Paducah—
has we stop to note the rapid progress of our city along all lines, social and commercial—we do not fail to realize what we have accomplished in the last few years. Especially is it a source of joy to our people to realize what we are doing for the spiritual elevation of our city. When a friend visits as we point with pride to our beautiful churches—not to be surpassed anywhere—indeed a stranger in our city for a few hours not long since passing our Broadway and standing at Seventh street remarked that he had never seen so much religion in brick and mortar in his life.

Our Y. M. C. A. has been a constant source of help and inspiration to our own as well as to the strange young men coming to Paducah. This possibly no building in this city has been a more forcible exponent of the truth that "the greatest thing in the world" is love than an unpretentious looking building set in the suburbs of the city, bearing the inscription
over the gate, "Home of the Friendless." This home has been kept up for five years through the generous contributions of the city of Paducah.
The most morbid pessimist would be converted to an optimistic way of looking at life if he were only a member of the board of directors, for to see the good in human nature one has only to go collecting for the home, as the ladies do every month, to the merchants, the grocers and to the market every day. Hardly indeed have they ever been refused help for the suffering and helpless. Surely a more generous hearted community does not exist than the one in which we live. As a proof of this fact our citizens are now contributing generously that we may build a community home that will be a credit to the city of Paducah. The board of directors already have the deed to 200 feet of ground in a desirable part of the city, the larger part of which is a gift from Dr. S. B. Caldwell. Also we have the deed to a home and lot valued at $600 from Mr. Arthur Harrison, with permission to sell and invest the proceeds in the new home. Our list of contributions will be published in full in our Sunday papers, by which time we hope the amount may be increased to $3000.

While we are hearing rumors of war, of pestilence that walketh in darkness, of starvation and persecution abroad, the people of Paducah are sitting in their comfortable homes unmolested and undisturbed by any of these calamities. Let us hasten the erection of an attractive, comfortable home in our midst for friendless little children and women who have no conception of the real meaning of the word. The larger the building the greater number we may be able to reach and care for. What more fitting memorial may we build to commemorate God's goodness to our fair city? Every one is asked to give something however small—this week.
The contributions will be gratefully received by the secretary or any member of the board.

"Then shall the righteous answer
him saying, Lord, when saw we Thee
hungry and fed Thee, or thirsty and gave Thee drink? When saw we Thee a stranger and took Thee in? And the King shall answer: Verily I say unto you inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done
it unto me."

WITHOUT FUEL
This engine, known as the "Columbia," is a new power engine, which is operated without fuel, steam, electricity or other propelling force, is the invention of W. G. Simons, of this city. The machine is the nearest to perpetual motion that can be made, and is in successful operation. The invention is simple and inexpensive. It consists of two upright axes, between which steel balls work upon wheels. The weight of the balls forms the power. There is no fuel, no water, no trouble. All the expense of operation is for lubrication oil, and the machine will run until it is worn out, without any attention except to check it when not in use. The plan is simple. There is one upright axis, about which is constructed a worm, arranged so that it winds quite closely. Held against this worm are case-hardened steel balls, kept there by a groove, out of which they cannot move sideways. At the base of this is a cog wheel moving in the same direction as the worm, and this works into another cog wheel, upon which is another worm. The second worm is only one-sixth the diameter of the first, and the coils of the worm are four times as far apart. The principle of the machine is that while four balls are descending on the large worm one ball is being forced up on the small one and moves up four times the rapidity with which it had come down. This keeps four balls descending while one is being elevated, and after it has descended it drops back again to connect with the large worm. There is a governor at the top to check the speed of the machine. Mr. Simons has a model, a very small affair, to which he has attached a sewing machine, but even with this he finds too much power. It is estimated that these machines may be made to develop half power, although the changes of construction would probably favor more machines and not such large ones, where great power is needed. The larger and taller these machines the greater the gravity and a consequent increase in speed and power.

Just like what I'll do now.
During a fire drill at the naval academy at Annapolis, Md., Cadet Stephen P. Rowan fell and the steam engine ran over him and broke his arm. Now, after he had fallen, forced his head and body out of the track of the moving engine, otherwise the accident would probably have been a fatal one. As soon as the engine had passed Rowan jumped to his feet, saluted Lieutenant-Commander Stoney, the officer in charge of the drill, and said: "I have broken my arm, sir."

Two men were arguing upon the question of the need of a general and immediate spelling reform, and the discussion was earnest. "Look here, Ferguson," said one of the two, at last, "why are you so bitter in your opposition to reforming the language?" "Because," replied the other, "I have just invested twenty dollars in a new dictionary." Mr. Ferguson's argument, it may be added, is not without force. There are many other persons ready to back it up on the same ground.

Naturalists published by parliament show that during 1895 exactly 6,108 cyclists were arrested in England for violations of the highway act. Of the number, 5,616 were fined. Only 514 of the unfortunate were women. While the number appears large, it is small by comparison with the arrests of drivers and horsemen for offenses against the same law, of whom there were 11,045. The law covers speeding, failure to carry lights, etc.

The prince of Wales has joined the ranks of automobilists, and a 10-horsepower Daimler-bodied phaeton, specially constructed for him, is now on view at a carriage store in St. James street, London. This car has every latest improvement, the vibration being reduced to a minimum by a new patent. It cost the prince $5,000, but any one else would have to pay $12,000.

See all those bushes with red berries growing along the river bank? That is coffee and the taller trees among which it is growing are pines, from which the world gets its "allspice," says Good Words. It looks like jungle, does it not? Yet many hundreds of pounds would not buy one hill-slope. Among the lovely flowers budding birds sparkle as they fly and hover; butterflies as large as the birds dispute the honey with them. As you turn round the corner you surprise parties of tiny ground doves, and every now and again the larger pees doves fly across the road. Up from the valley below the sounds of voices and laughter. Stop your carriage and look down. Those are the work on a coffee estate, and those tall terraces partitioned off into squares are the "barbecues" upon which the berries are dried. You can see that some of the berries are a different color to the rest. The dark ones are those that are covered with rosy berries; the others are those which have not yet been filled.

In the "Studies from the Psychological Laboratory of Chicago" there is a short report by Prof. Buck on the overestimation of vertical as compared with horizontal lines. The overestimation was found to be slightly increased by placing the observer on his side, so that the head and eyes were at right angles to their usual position. This is regarded as an argument against the explanation of the illusion by eye movement.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

With Special Reference to the Stone Age in Egypt.

Sir John Evans dealt with the antiquity of man with special reference to the stone age in Egypt, in a presidential address delivered by him at the Birmingham and Midland Institute recently, says the London Times. He said that forty years ago the almost universal belief of those who had not superficially approached the question was that a literal interpretation was to be placed on the opening chapters of the book of Genesis, and that the chronology of Archbishop Usher and others in fixing the creation of man at the year 4004 B. C. was beyond all reasonable question. It was not until 1859, when the subject was investigated by the late Sir Joseph Prestwich himself and others, that the presence of objects of human workmanship in association with the remains of extinct mammals in beds of gravel, sand and loam was almost universally regarded as an established fact. The inconclusive studies of Joseph Landon of Salford college, Birmingham, had resulted in his discovery in the gravels of the valley of the Itew of an implement of the same general type as those from many other valleys in England and France, but formed from a different material, and not as usual, chipped out of flint. If further discoveries of this kind were made our present views as to the northern limits of the existence of such implements would have to be materially modified, and the area over which discoveries of this character were made might be considerably extended. Assuming that the occupation of the earth by man had been continuous, there must at some time or other have been a transition from the paleolithic stage culture to the neolithic, but of such transition little trustworthy indications had as yet been found, and over a great part of Europe, at all events, there appeared to be "a great gap fixed," which at present it was impossible to bridge over in a satisfactory manner.

There are many laws that are ignored, but the greatest is the law of consideration.
Civilization being consideration, and we being civilized, why do we have to put an iron fence around every grass spot?
If we would only handle men as we do timber, use the second part and only throw away the cull, how we would gain by the act.
That which we get for nothing we discard regardless of worth, and that for which we pay we value according to price, and also regardless of worth.
Is there anything grander in creation than a manly man or a womanly woman, and anything weaker than a womanish man or a manish woman?
Blue being the color of bright skies and rosy cheeks, why do we say when a man is sad that he is blue. Why not change to a dull, lifeless color, and say grey?

Setting a Good Example.
The directors of a French railroad, the Compagnie d'Orleans, recently issued advertisements that after one month all the posts, pictures and bills announcing their dates, pills and embrocations along the line of route will be abolished, so that the traveler will find more to be able to gaze upon the fields and hills and homesteads without being reminded at every few yards of the tomb.

The Younger Brother.
Ethel—Who gave the bride away?
Ethel—Well, her young brother shouted, "Hooray! she's married at last!" right after the ceremony.—Puck.

ANTIQUITY OF MAN.

With Special Reference to the Stone Age in Egypt.

Sir John Evans dealt with the antiquity of man with special reference to the stone age in Egypt, in a presidential address delivered by him at the Birmingham and Midland Institute recently, says the London Times. He said that forty years ago the almost universal belief of those who had not superficially approached the question was that a literal interpretation was to be placed on the opening chapters of the book of Genesis, and that the chronology of Archbishop Usher and others in fixing the creation of man at the year 4004 B. C. was beyond all reasonable question. It was not until 1859, when the subject was investigated by the late Sir Joseph Prestwich himself and others, that the presence of objects of human workmanship in association with the remains of extinct mammals in beds of gravel, sand and loam was almost universally regarded as an established fact. The inconclusive studies of Joseph Landon of Salford college, Birmingham, had resulted in his discovery in the gravels of the valley of the Itew of an implement of the same general type as those from many other valleys in England and France, but formed from a different material, and not as usual, chipped out of flint. If further discoveries of this kind were made our present views as to the northern limits of the existence of such implements would have to be materially modified, and the area over which discoveries of this character were made might be considerably extended. Assuming that the occupation of the earth by man had been continuous, there must at some time or other have been a transition from the paleolithic stage culture to the neolithic, but of such transition little trustworthy indications had as yet been found, and over a great part of Europe, at all events, there appeared to be "a great gap fixed," which at present it was impossible to bridge over in a satisfactory manner.

ON SIDE PATH AND BOULEVARD

The last report of Treasurer Tattersall of the League of American Wheelmen shows the league to have a balance of $2,338.65.

The New Hampshire division of the League of American Wheelmen is now constructing roads connecting Dover, Summersworth and Nashua with the Massachusetts line.

A lady in Sacramento, Cal., claims proudly to be the authorized descendant of the original inventor of the pedal-propelled bicycle. She has a machine which she claims was built by her father in France prior to 1810. How much prior is not stated. She is probably waiting to name the exact date until she learns what others have to claim. She can then go home one better.

Naturalists published by parliament show that during 1895 exactly 6,108 cyclists were arrested in England for violations of the highway act. Of the number, 5,616 were fined. Only 514 of the unfortunate were women. While the number appears large, it is small by comparison with the arrests of drivers and horsemen for offenses against the same law, of whom there were 11,045. The law covers speeding, failure to carry lights, etc.

The prince of Wales has joined the ranks of automobilists, and a 10-horsepower Daimler-bodied phaeton, specially constructed for him, is now on view at a carriage store in St. James street, London. The prince intends to use it at Sandringham, and has already had several lessons in the art of auto-driving. This car has every latest improvement, the vibration being reduced to a minimum by a new patent. It cost the prince $5,000, but any one else would have to pay $12,000.

See all those bushes with red berries growing along the river bank? That is coffee and the taller trees among which it is growing are pines, from which the world gets its "allspice," says Good Words. It looks like jungle, does it not? Yet many hundreds of pounds would not buy one hill-slope. Among the lovely flowers budding birds sparkle as they fly and hover; butterflies as large as the birds dispute the honey with them. As you turn round the corner you surprise parties of tiny ground doves, and every now and again the larger pees doves fly across the road. Up from the valley below the sounds of voices and laughter. Stop your carriage and look down. Those are the work on a coffee estate, and those tall terraces partitioned off into squares are the "barbecues" upon which the berries are dried. You can see that some of the berries are a different color to the rest. The dark ones are those that are covered with rosy berries; the others are those which have not yet been filled.

In the "Studies from the Psychological Laboratory of Chicago" there is a short report by Prof. Buck on the overestimation of vertical as compared with horizontal lines. The overestimation was found to be slightly increased by placing the observer on his side, so that the head and eyes were at right angles to their usual position. This is regarded as an argument against the explanation of the illusion by eye movement.

Almost There Already.
Miss Foster—Yes, dear, we have been engaged for a long time, but what has prevented us from taking the inevitable step has always been the fatal question, "Will he love me when I grow old?" Miss Tenny—Don't worry, darling; you'll soon know now.—Stray Stories.
